

1. Almost every teacher has a basic understanding of what constitutes school-friendly attire.
2. Dressing too casually sends off a vibe to students and fellow faculty and might undermine their ability to teach from a position of respect and authority.
3. A teacher is a modal figure.
4. ESL learners come from different cultures where they perceive dress code as influential.
5. Attire shouldn't be distracting to students.
6. Teachers should dress in a way that promotes respect and shows students that they're the authority in the classroom.
7. We can clearly agree - everyone wants smart teachers, but reducing the conception of "smart" to their clothing and physical appearance is too narrow and bizarre to some people in the profession.
